This narrow strip of land between Dijon and Corgoloin is famous among all the palates of the world. Imagine a fan of architecture who did not go to Paris? Impossible. A lover of local wine must have been there.

See and drink: mostly red. The best in the world. 1500 hectares of a nectar delicate on the 16 villages of the Côte. On its own, the Côte de Nuits grows all the great red wines of the Burgundy vineyard, including the very prestigious La-Romanée, Romanée-Saint-Vivant, and of course the Romanée-Conti, one of the most famous wines in the world, and also the most expensive. To travel the Champs-Elysees of Burgundy, it was necessary to have a road to the height of the Parisian avenue: the tourist route of Grands Crus unfolds a marked route of about sixty kilometers, along the Côte de Nuits and Côte de Beaune. On foot, by bike, on horseback if you want, you can easily reach the path of Grands Crus for a walk in the heart of the terroir and Climats. Listed as World Heritage by UNESCO, climates refer to these parcels of vines where the soil's richness, varietal and human work combine to give birth to a unique mosaic of hierarchical and renowned wines in Burgundy. You will find sometimes a well, a cabote or a bread oven, witnesses of a traditional way of life and a past always present. Further to the west, the high Côte de Nuits, less famous than their sisters from below, with their valleys and their hills, offer fresh and exhilarating wines, and unforgettable strolls between wine coast and valley of Ouche . There are a thousand and one ways to discover the world of Burgundy wines.

Between Ladoix-Serrigny and the hillsides of the Maranges, the Côte de Beaune winegrowing region covers 20km from north to south. Facing the morning sun, these vineyards are never more than a few hundred meters wide. Yet they produce red and white wines that are internationally renowned. Their reputation also extends to the town of Beaune, an historical center where you can discover all the secrets of the Bourgogne winegrowing region.

A little farther to the west, behind the Côte de Beaune, the vines flourish on a gently concave plateau, 400m above sea level. This is the Hautes Côtes de Beaune. On the sunniest slopes, around 20 communes produce lively and accessible wines from the Bourgogne Hautes Côtes de Beaune appellation.
